March Madness

March madness is fast approaching and will be here in no time. This year college basketball has been crazy with 7 teams having been ranked number one overall. Many experts are saying this is the most wide open year for a team to win in a long time. As far as the local teams around the area, Wisconsin started off the year a little shaky in the non-conference, but have picked it up as of late winning their last 4 games. Marquette on the other hand started off hot and got ranked as high as 18th in the Country, but have slipped a bit in late February falling out of the top 25. Both teams should be in the 6-9 seed range, when the bracket gets released March 15th, depending on how they finish the rest of the season and conference tournament. Marquette will be looking to get its first win in the tournament since 2013 and Wisconsin is hoping to get its first win since upsetting the number 1 seed overall and making it to the sweet 16 in 2017. Hopefully this tournament provides the usual upsets and cinderella teams making deep runs and adds chaos to your bracket pools. The odds of getting a perfect bracket is 1 in 9,223,372,036,854,775,808. Good luck to everyone making brackets and Go Badgers and Marquette!

A Message From Jay

Hello, and welcome to March!

Our winter weather season has not been too bad. We haven't had too many snow storms and hardly any bitter cold days. Let's hope this trend continues with the first of spring being March 20th. Opening Day is right around the corner for the Milwaukee Brewers! They begin the season with a three-game series against the Chicago Cubs starting on Thursday, March 26th.

The Brewers have made the playoffs the last two years and the fan base is optimistic that they can do it again this season. It will be a tougher challenge as they lost a couple of key players in the off-season, Yasmani Grandal and Mike Moustakas. They will have to replace some starting pitching, as well as reinforce their bullpen.

Milwaukee did obtain a lot of infielder talent this winter and a starting right fielder in Avisail Garcia. It should be a competitive team and if we are in the hunt going into the All-Star break, hopefully the owner, Mark Attanasio, will make some acquisitions to improve our chances of making the playoffs again. Enjoy the beginning of Spring and Go Brew Crew!

Be well,

Brewers
